FBI – LEEDA and Lockmasters Security Institute (LSI) present a one-day summit on the tools and techniques of today's sophisticated criminals, including covert entry techniques.

Designed strictly for law enforcement, this highly informative summit focuses on the entry techniques and tools used by the criminal element today. Many of these tools are often unrecognizable to law enforcement. For today's pro-active law enforcement agency to train their personnel, they need the benefit of knowledge that the world-renowned experts at LSI have to offer. In addition to the benefit to the Detectives who investigate these crimes, this summit will also focus on covert entry methods and how officers involved in special operations can recognize, detect and take advantage of these entry techniques. By looking at commercially available tools and how they are used, attendees will become better equipped to deal with this growing problem. With many years' experience in technical operations, the LSI staff brings unparalleled expertise to this subject. After attending this summit you will view threats to secure areas in a different way and learn techniques that will help you not only in conducting covert operations but also detecting them.

Who should attend:

- Officers involved in the investigation and deterrence of burglaries
- Drug and Intelligence officers doing technical operations
- Surveillance officers
- Crime Prevention officers
- Supervisors of the above units are also encouraged to participate

The summit will be held on Friday, April 2, 2008 at LSI, 1014 South Main St., Nicholasville, KY 40356. A continental breakfast will be served at 8:30 A.M. Lunch will be provided to participants by LSI. The summit will conclude at 3:30P.M. There is no charge for Law Enforcement personnel to participate in this summit. Class size is limited, so register today.
